VOLUME THIRTEEN, NUMBER 184 MONESSEN, PA., SATURDAY, JANUARY 16, 1915 DELIVERED FOR SIX CENTS THE WEEK

GREAT WORK HAS BEEN ACCOMPLISHED BY COUNTY SEALERS

People of Westmoreland county are just beginning to appreciate the protecting arm of the office of sealers and weights and the enormous good that is being accomplished by the men in charge of this work, Messrs. H. E. Rinehart and William Berlin.

One only needs to step into the office of the sealers in the court house and glance over the enormous pile of confiscated false measures to get an idea of the thousands of dollars that are being saved to the consumers by warped, twisted and fake measures.

It semes a great pleasure for these gentlemen to show a visitor just what is being accomplished along this line of reform. While this paper has advocated the appointment of sealers and weights and measures, we little dreamed that there was so much cheating and false measuring as has been brought to light in the partial year's work that has been done by Messrs. Rinehart and Berlin. Their offices are equipped with the most modern appliances for testing measures and their standards are the best that can be found anywhere and the work they have thus far done has given general satisfaction.

But the whole process is an education. It is a study for the purchaser the consumer and the dealer and to get the best results all must work in harmony with the law and the rules laid down by the dealers. While the law governs their duties, people must co-operate in order to get the best results, for after all, all reforms are a matter of public sentiment.

The sealers have just issued a small pamphlet entitled "A Few Hints to Housekeepers and purchasers" that is being distributed and may be had for the asking, that is intended to spread information as to how to take care of many things that have to do with the high cost of living. It contains tables of weights and measures and much general advice. The book demonstrates that the men who are doing the work are also making the business a study and gives the people the assurance that in a short time Westmoreland county will have as good protection as any county in the land.

So far Messrs. Rinehart and Berlin have found the people generally very willing to co-operate with them in the performance of their duties. There have only been nineteen arrests thus far. The office is being conducted more in an educational way than the enforcement of law. But people must appreciate the fact that they are forbidden to use false weights or measures and that they must live up to the law. Monessen people as well as all others will be made welcome by dropping into the office and getting acquainted with some of the things that have already been done. It is to return convinced that the office is a necessity and that it is being conducted in an entirely satisfactory manner.

Westmoreland County Has Another Murder Case

In a revolver duel in front of the Union Supply store at Standard, near Mt.Pleasant, this county, at 10 o'clock Thursday night, one man was killed and another seriously wounded. One of the duelists is under arrest and the police are searching for his companion.

THE DEAD

John Musirrer, aged 32, married; miner; shot through the abdomen.

THE INJURED

John Bartnick, shot in the left side near the heart. In hospital at Mt. Pleasant.

Musierer and Bartnick were returning to Standard from Mt. Pleasant when two men opened fire on them without warning. Musierer and Bartnick returned the fire. Musierer fell fatally wounded and a moment later his companion dropped. The two men fled and were pursued by residents who had been attracted by the shooting. Frank Lebright was arrester after a short chase, but his companion escaped.

MEETINGS MAY BE HELD NEXT WEEK

The attendance at the union services last night was equal to former meetings, the United Brethren church being filled to its capacity by another enthusiastic audience. Rev. J. B. Swain delivered the sermon upon the subject "What Think Ye of Christ?" The sermon was developed after the unique manner peculiar to the eloquent delivery of the speaker. The closing appeal was effective and fruitful. The greater part of the congregation lingered for an afterservice of prayer. Many were the expressions for a continuation of the union meetings, however, the pastors were not all able to be present and a definite decision was not reached pertaining to the same.

Rev W. S. Carson will deliver the sermon tonight in the United Presbyterian church. Whether this is the last service or only the beginning of a more extensive campaign, all should hear Rev. Carson tonight.

LOCAL BENEFIT FOR MONESSEN'S POOR EVENT OF NEXT WEEK

Next Friday, January 22, there will be a home talent performance in the Star theatre for the benefit of the worthy poor in Monessen and vicinity. This is an enterprise on the part of local people and should be well patronized not only on account of the cause, but because much of our best local talent is taking part.

The resumption of the mills and mines may lead some to the thought that with this activity the demand for assistance disappears but this is not entirely the case. It will take months to overcome the effects of the depression and our board of charities is meeting daily demands for assistance.

The proceeds from the performance will be immediately turned over to the board of charities to help continue the good work that has been carried on in the past year.

Tickets have been selling quite rapidly. Seats will be reserved upon application Tuesday and thereafter until the performance. The program arranged consists of music, recitations and a twenty minute sketch by James Russel and company. Mr. Russel is chief clerk at the Pittsburgh Steel and has devoted considerable time to work of this character and he promises something good. It will be good to attend this performance and at the same time you will be doing something for the needy.

ANOTHER GREAT PICTURE AT OLYMPIC

Wonderful things are in store for Monday at the Olympic. In addition to the great "Master Key" we will have the second episode of "Helen's Hazard," the subject for Monday being "Helen's Plot at the R. R. Cut," a strikingly sensational feature to be shown Monday, and thereafter the remaining episodes will be shown on Fridays.

This picture yesterday was highly pleasing to everyone, the heroine going through one of the most daring feats of forcing her horse down a steep hill and precipice, both falling into a river and going out of sight. Later the girl astride the horse was carried out to land, and after a mad race, headed off a freight train, jumping thereto from the animal's back, thus preventing the wrecking of an oncoming passenger train.

In addition to "The Master Key" and Helen's Plot at the R. R. Cut will be J. Waren Kerrigan in "A Captain of Villainy" and Mary Pickford in "The Moonshine Maid and the Man." The greatest Monday night feature the Olympic has ever had.

January Clearance Sale

THE SKY IS CLEAR—It was cloudy for a considerable length of time— a continuous shattering, rumbling and crash of thunder and flare and flash of fire and lightning—beneath which men and women and the monuments of the industries they have built lay idle. The clouds which earlier threatened to throw a pall over the the business of the country have rolled away. It is clear and from all over the country reports of the revival of business are steadily flowing in.

THE AIMS OF THIS STORE ALWAYS SHINE CLEAR —

POP BOTTLES ARE EXEMPT

County Sealer of Weights and Measures Harry Rinehart has received notification that the State Bureau of Standards has decided that all bottles containing pop and all liquids sold for five cents or less do not necessarily have to be marked. The new law goes into effect January 24.

As the law now stands the contents of all packages and bottles that sell for any amount greater than five cents must be marked plainly. Confections now selling for 5 cents or less were first exempted and new bottles are included. There is a heavy fine for the violation of the law.

FILLED THE STAR AGAIN

Mr. and Mrs. DuVea, the popular dancers filled the Star theatre again last night, the place being crowded to its capacity, even the boxes. Their program was materially changed and everybody was pleased with this young couple's work. NOT AN ISOLATED CASE

Many Similar Cases in Monessen and Vicinity.

This Monessen man's story given here is not an isolated case by any means; week after week, year after year, our neighbors are telling similar good news.

Mrs. A. W. Jenkins, 25 McKee avenue, Monessen, Pa. says: "For the past three months I suffered from attacks of kidney trouble. I first noticed a severe pain in my back and thought it was lumbago. I frequently had dizzy spells. My kidneys didn't act properly and the kidney secretions were unnatural. I heard so much about Doan's Kidney Pills that I got a box at Litzinger's drug store now the Hirsch Drug Co.) and used them. Before I had taken one box I was greatly benefitted."

STILL PRAISES DOAN'S

On January 26, 1914, Mrs. Jenkins said: "I have the same faith in Doan's Kidney Pills now as when I gave my former statement some years ago. I still take them whenever occasion demands and they always give me relief."

Lightship No. 4

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

One day thirty years ago it was reported to the Trinity board, which has charge of all lights on the coast of Great Britain, that a shoal had made in the English channel about nine miles due east of the Lizard. At the spot indicated there had been thirty fathoms of water ever since a British ship went to sea, and the board, of course, argued that there had been a mistake. It was a fishing craft which had reported the shoal and found only fourteen feet of water over it, and a craft was sent out at once to make an official investigation. What had happened was this: It was a bowlder strewn bottom, and two or three old wrecks had drifted together and piled up on each other until a dangerous obstruction had been formed. It was as if a great rock had been heaved up from the bottom, and the board must guard against the danger without delay.

Thirty years ago the diver's dress was not what it is today, nor could men handle explosives under water as they can now. After two or three vain attempts to clear away the wrecks the work was left for a storm to accomplish, and meanwhile lightship No 4, under Captain Crox, was moved around from Mounts bay and anchored near the spot and notice given to mariners.

That night it was the captain's watch from 8 till midnight. A gale had come up. It had come 10 o'clock when a sudden hail reached the lightship. The captain was aft and his mate forward, but he knew at once that the hail came from seaward. It was not so dark but that one could see a ship 300 feet away, even though she had no lights aboard.

As soon as a port fire was ignited the sea was lighted up for hundreds of feet around in a ghastly way, and both men looked for the craft they supposed to be near by. They looked in vain till the signal was nearly finished. Then a ship's yawl, driving right up in the teeth of the gale, hove into sight. She was without a mast or sail or oars, and the only figure in her sat in the stern sheets, and his arms and legs were bound around with ropes.

The man was bareheaded and dressed as a landsman, and as he drove past within twenty feet of the rail they had a look square into his eyes, and the agony on his face made them shudder. They started to throw him a rope, but as the coil swung into the air they remembered that, being bound, he could make no use of it. The yawl and the man went straight to windward and in a couple of minutes were out of sight, and the men found themselves all a-tremble. Captain Crox was full of indignation over the crime of sending a man afloat in that manner and of pity for the victim, when his mate touched him on the arm and shouted in his ear:

"If I was ashore, captain, all the money in England would not bribe me to set foot on this deck again!"

"What's the matter with you?" was called in reply. "It's only a bit of shore villainy that we must report."

"It's nothing that's happened ashore sir. Did you take notice that the craft was driving right in the teeth of the gale? It wasn't a live man in that boat. She was going to windward with a ghost, and I'd give the bit I have in the bank if I'd not seen it."

It was agreed between them that nothing be said to the other watch when they turned out, and they went on duty without knowing or suspecting that anything out of the way had happened.

While carrying the thing out with pretended indifference, Captain Crox was, as a matter of fact, pretty thoroughly upset over it and on turning in found he could not go to sleep. He had been lying on his bunk and turning the thing over in his mind for an hour or so and the gale was still howling and the lightship bouncing about when he realized from the movement of the watch that they had been hailed. He was out of his bunk and on deck just as one of them lighted a port fire, and you can judge his feelings when he saw the former scene re-enacted. There were the yawl and the man, and the boat slowly forged past them and disappeared to windward.

There was no more sleep for anybody on board No. 4 that night, and next day, when the gale broke and the tender came alongside, all demanded that they be put ashore at once. The captain was as badly rattled as the others. They were guyed and ridiculed, of course, but they stood so firm that the tender brought off another crew, and they were relieved from duty. A new crew was assigned, but the man and the boat appeared to them twice in one night and drove them ashore, as they did the others.

A third crew went out and for two weeks began to prepare to remove the wrecks. Some progress had been made when a three days' gale set in from the north, and there were more wrecks than had been known for ten years before. For two days the lightship hung to her anchors, though having a signal of distress out after the first day, but when the gale abated she had disappeared. She had been swept down the channel and out to sea, and a week later she was passed bottom up more than 300 miles away. The same storm broke up and removed the wrecks, and there was no longer need to keep a light at that spot.

A Belgian War Romance

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

One quiet evening in the summer of 1913 a pair of young lovers stood on a bridge that crossed the river Lys, in Belgium. They were there for a parting. The young man was to leave for the coast early the next morning and thence for America. Nothing could be more peaceful than the scene about them. A young moon stood in the west. If an occasional breeze stirred the leaves on the trees they were stirred lightly. As for sound, there was only a slight gurgle beneath them as the current passed the abutment of the bridge.

"Mina," said the young man, "cheer up. It will not be long before in America I shall have saved enough money to send for you. That we may have a definite time to be reunited I promise you that one year from today if not before you shall receive the passage money to bring you to me."

"And I, Hans, will work and save so that if you do not succeed in gaining enough to send for me I may have enough for the journey."

When the year had passed a great change had come over Belgium. The Germans were pouring into the country from the east, the French from the south. Wilhelmina had received letters from her lover in New York that money would be sent her for her passage, but before it was dispatched the war had stopped the mails.

On the anniversary of their parting at evening, Wilhelmina went to the bridge on which they had stood a year before. It was now a ruin, more than half of it having been destroyed. Here and there across the fields were flashes followed by a distant roar of guns while searchlights sent their columns of light across the sky like the tails of nearby comets.

What should she do? Her home had been that day in the line of fire and was a ruin. Before leaving it she had snatched up her savings, and these she had with her. Standing there in the identical spot where she had stood in quiet with her lover, she resolved to go to him if possible.

There was no way of announcing her coming beforehand. She had neither writing materials nor a way to send a letter. Indeed it was doubtful if even she could break through the line of war to reach the coast. And if she arrived at a port would she find a vessel? Nevertheless she turned her face toward Holland and set off in the darkness.

Her adventures are a long story by itself. Fortune favoring, she reached Rotterdam in safety and there found that she had the means to buy a steerage ticket on an outgoing steamer to New York.

On the arrival of the vessel the emigrants were landed at Ellis island, and Wilhelmina among others was brought before the emigration commissioners. There she was asked how she would be provided for in America, and when she said that she had no money she was told that she would be sent back to Holland.

Her modesty, the consciousness that she was coming to marry a man without a special bidding, had caused her to conceal what she expected. Besides, suppose Hans had changed! But the prospect of being sent back to a land running in blood, where even the little home in which she had been born and always lived had been leveled, overcame her reticence, and she told a love story that no pen, however inspired, could put on paper.

"Hans must be found!"

Such were the instructions given to a messenger, who departed on his errand.

There is a committee of Belgians in New York whose purpose it is to look after their incoming fellow countrymen. The head of the committee was found, and he in turn started a hunt for Hans.

Ever since the war had broken out Hans had been anxious about his Wilhelmina. He had not dared to send her his savings for fear they would be lost. Indeed, one of the troubles brought on by the war was the inability to send funds to Europe. He had written her, but without expectation that she would receive his letters. As to receiving letters from her, he had no faith in that either.

Hans was at work one afternoon when a fellow workman came to him and told him that the boss wished to see him in the office. Hans laid down his tools and reported as directed. He found beside the boss a man, who asked him:

"Are you Hans Wichtel?"

"I am."

"There is a girl on Ellis island who came over from Belgium. She says you will marry her."

"Mina?"

"She says her name is Wilhelmina."

"Marry her! Of course I will marry her. Where can I find her?"

Hans wished to go at once to Ellis island, but suddenly remembering that a man in overalls was not in wedding costume tidied himself up, then set off to join his sweetheart.

If the authorities had any doubt about Wilhelmina's story it was dispelled by the fervent embrace of the lovers. But Uncle Sam's emigrant officials take no man's promise of marriage, and there are no breaches of promise in his large family. A man went with the couple to the city hall in New York, where a license was procured. Then the pair went to the office of the Belgian committee, where the marriage ceremony was performed.

NEW MONESSEN THEATRE MONDAY NIGHT JANUARY 18th

"The Midnight Maids" Tickets now on sale at Box Office

BIG CROWD ATTENDS THE BURLESQUE

The Merry Burlesquers last night at the New Monesen theatre, drew a full house, auditorium, balcony and gallery. The show is reported clean and void of anything that might be considered objectionable. The comedians were good, as were also the choruses.

The burlesques on "The New Janitor" and "From Broadway to Atlantic City" were full of comedy, intermingled with bright, catchy music and good singing. Some of the girls in the chorus were pretty and the costumes were very attractive and many changes were made in dress during the performance.

Those who went to the New Monessen theatre last night expecting to see a raw, rotten burlesque show, were sorely disappointed as the show was kept at a fairly respectful standard—more on the order of a musical comedy and can be rated a clean show. This company was here a year ago and the production last night was along the same order, but nothing was pulled off that could be termed objectionable, which is greatly to the credit of Manager Burton.

A HOME PRODUCT

There is substantial truth to justify the claim that the distribution of money in the automobile trade at the present time is doing much to alleviate the financial depression as about everything used in the manufacture is obtained in the home markets. Thus the distribution of $40,000,000 in the year for motor vehicles of all kinds, including commercial trucks, almost exclusively benefit our own people. Materials needed in the manufacture of automobiles which must be imported are comparatively trifling.

Employment is given to many thousands of skilled artisans and unskilled laborers by the automobile trade, which calls upon so many lines of industry to supply materials and parts for the completely equipped machine. Moreover, the American automobile is practically an all-American product.

The total product of the automobile manufactories of the United States for the third quarter of 1914, according to competent authority, says an exchange, was at the rate of $40,000,000 a year. These figures demonstrate the tremendous importance of the industry which has grown up within a decade. This estimate would seem to justify the claim put forward that the making of automobiles now ranks not far below iron and steel among the manufacturing interests of this country. Probably it comes next after cotton and woolen textile manufactures.

OUR COMMON SCHOOLS

The system of common school education which now exercises its beneficent influences in every part of the United States and Canada was fathered by John Treadwell, a jurist and governor of Connecticut, who was born 169 years ago, November 23, 1745. The public school in its pioneer development, can be traced back almost to the beginnings of Connecticut and Massachusetts, and the Dutch in New York and the Quakers in Pennsylvania early laid the foundation for a system of general free education. In most of the American colonies, however, education was a private enterprise up to the revolution, and for many years thereafter. During the first two or three decades of the American republic the public schools were held in contempt, and it came to be understood that they were for the very poor. In some states indeed, they were called "pauper schools." Cnonecticut took the lead in changing all this and making the public school a respected and honored institution and Judge Treadwell was the prime power in effecting this change. The Nutmeg State held the lead until the period from 1835 to 1845, when the public school system as we now know it began to take definite shape.

THE OLDEST WINE PRODUCER

The Speer N. J. Wine Co. was founded in 1853 by Alfred Speer. the first large wine grower in this country. Some years before the war of the Robellion. Mr. Speer planted vineyards at Passaic, N. J., with the Port Grape Vines from Portugal. These vines were rapidly multiplied until they covered many acres with the small rich grapes suitable only for wine. This was before the beginning of the Wine Industry in California. That state was then almost a wilderness. Gold had just been discovered and the great rush to the gold fields which began in 1849 was in full blast.

During all the years intervening the Speers N. J. Wine Co. claim they have carried out the first principles adopted to produce only perfect, pure, rich and thoroughly matured wines. and their claim seems well founded from the evidence of physicians and chemists.

MONEY TO BE MADE AT HOME

In the current issue of Farm and Fireside, a contributor writes an article showing ways to be prosperous though you stay at home. It is particularly suggestive to farmers' wives and daughters. Following is one of the stories told in the article:

"A girl when dining at a city restaurant noticed the exorbitant prices quoted for guinea squabs. She visited a poultry commission before going back to the farm and asked if there was a demand for guinea fowls.

"A decided one" was the prompt reply "and I don't see why some of the women who have the chicken craze don't waken up to the fact that there's money in guineas. The man or woman who makes a specialty of raising them, feeding them as they should be fed, and putting them on the market at the right age in fancy condition, could get top prices and have a sure market. It's a "get rich" proposition.

"Starting with the few guinea fowls about the farm which had been kept to frighten away hawks and vermin, but which no one ever thought of eating, this girl is building up a profitable trade with some of the leading hotels and restaurants in the city nearest to her."

Monessen Christians Win Basket Ball Game

The Monessen Christian basket ball team won its second game in the seven game series which they are playing with the Lyceum boys of St. Leonard's church. The lineup of last night was as follows:

Lyceum		Christian
Stark	f.	McDowell
Donovan	f.	Lee
D Ryan	c.	Martz
Quinlon	g.	Scott
McMahan	g.	Campbell

The final score was 16-14 in favor of the Christian team. Field goals—McDowell 2; Scott 2; Martz 2; Stark 5.

Field Goals—McDowell, 4; Stark 4.

RATE INCREASE NECESSARY

FARMERS' UNION OFFICIALS THINK RAILROADS ARE ENTITLED TO MORE REVENUE.

Products of Plow and Farmer Who Lives at Home Should Be Exempt From Increase.

By Peter Radford.
Lecturer National Farmers' Union.

The recent action of the Interstate Commerce Commission in granting an increase in freight rates in the eastern classification of territory; the application of the roads to state and interstate commissions for an increase in rates, and the utterances of President Wilson on the subject bring the farmers of this nation face to face with the problem of an increase in freight rates. It is the policy of the Farmers' Union to meet the issues affecting the welfare of the farmers squarely and we will do so in this instance.

The transportation facilities of the United States are inadequate to effectively meet the demands of commerce and particularly in the South and West additional railway mileage is needed to accommodate the movement of farm products. If in the wisdom of our Railroad Commissions an increase in freight rates is necessary to bring about an improvement in our transportation service, and an extension of our mileage, then an increase should be granted, and the farmer is willing to share such proportion of the increase as justly belongs to him, but we have some suggestions to make as to the manner in which this increase shall be levied.

Rates Follow Lines of Least Resistance.

The freight rates of the nation have been built up along lines of least resistance. The merchant, the manufacturer, the miner, the miller, the lumberman and the cattleman have had their traffic bureaus thoroughly organized and in many instances they have pursued the railroad without mercy and with the power of organized tonnage they have hammered the life out of the rates and with unrestrained greed they have eaten the vitals out of our transportation system and since we have had railroad commissions, these interests, with skill and cunning, are represented at every hearing in which their business is involved.

The farmer is seldom represented at rate hearings, as his organizations have never had the finances to employ counsel to develop his side of the case and, as a result, the products of the plow bear an unequal burden of the freight expense. A glance at the freight tariffs abundantly proves this assertion. Cotton, the leading agricultural product of the South, already bears the highest freight rate of any necessary commodity in commerce, and the rate on agricultural products as a whole is out of proportion with that of the products of the factory and the mine.

We offer no schedule of rates, but hope the commission will be able to give the railroad such an increase in rates as is necessary without levying a further toll upon the products of the plow. The instance seems to present an opportunity to the Railroad Commissions to equalize the rates as between agricultural and other classes of freight without disturbing the rates on staple farm products.

What Is a Fair Rate?

We do not know what constitutes a basis for rate making and have never heard of anyone who did claim to know much about it, but if the prosperity of the farm is a factor to be considered and the railroad commission concludes that an increase in rates is necessary, we would prefer that it come to us through articles of consumption on their journey from the factory to the farm. We would, for example, prefer that the rate on hogs remain as at present and the rate on meat bear the increase, for any farmer can then avoid the burden by raising his own meat, and a farmer who will not try to raise his own meat ought to be penalized. We think the rate on coal and brick can much better bear an increase than the rate on cotton and flour. We would prefer that the rate on plows remain the same, and machinery, pianos and such articles as the poorer farmer cannot hope to possess bear the burden of increase.

The increase in rates should be so arranged that the farmer who lives at home will bear no part of the burden, but let the farmer who boards in other states and countries and who feeds his stock in foreign lands, pay the price of his folly.
